

we are energynation

Each day, millions of men and women work to develop the oil and natural gas that fuel the American economy and way of life. Despite this, our industry and the very energy resources that keep our economic engine running are in peril.

So what is our best line of defense against harmful legislation and shortsighted policy prescriptions? It's the 9.2 million Americans whose jobs rely on the oil and natural gas industry.

By uniting these individuals and amplifying their collective voices, Energy Nation provides an opportunity to directly influence public policy outcomes in Washington. Whether it's about taxes, domestic access, hydraulic fracturing, climate regulations or Canadian oil sands development, Energy Nation advocates can make a difference.

Through Energy Nation, advocates can:

Explore critical issues facing our industry;

Connect with one other via social networks and other Energy Nation tools; and Share their perspectives with state and federal policymakers to affect positive change.

For more information, please visit www.energynation.org or contact Deryck Spooner at spoonerd@api.org. Together, we can continue to deliver the affordable, reliable energy that America depends on for decades to come.

Energy Nation
brings together
the employees,
retirees, vendors
and suppliers
who develop
and deliver
America's energy,
to ensure their
voices are heard
by our nation's policymakers.